Robert Laskowski is a physician executive, interested in the health of individuals and communities, with 30 years experience as a senior executive, practicing physician and medical educator.

The tight end said he aims not only to be a target but also someone who can draw defenses toward him.

To address this problem, Massachusetts is among the first states where neurologists have begun to recommend treatment for stroke patients without seeing them in person.